

Sandra Sokowski, Ph.D.

Instructor of English

Department of English and Foreign Languages
Education and Humanities, 296
1200 N. DuPont Hwy
Dover DE 19901
302.857.6583 office
302.857.6563 fax
ssokowski@desu.edu

Education:

- Ph.D. Comparative Literature, 2011. Rutgers University
- M.A. English, 2004. Rutgers University
- B.A. French, B.A. Comparative Literature, 2000. Rutgers College

Research Interests:

- Interested in changing canons of World Literature, and in the representation of marginalized figures in 19th and early 20th century fiction, more specifically the representation of the working class.

Publications:

- “Dickens’ False Moustaches and Mercier’s Nouveau Paris: Re-gendering Violence in A Tale of Two Cities.” (in process)
- “The Immaterial Revolutionary in Lew Misérables” (in process)
- “Nomadology and the Rhetoric on Terrorism”
Exit 9: The Rutgers Journal of Comparative Literature Vol. 9 (2008)
- “Translations of ‘Eve’ and ‘Lew Javanaises’: Two Poems by Marie Krysinska”
Portals” Graduate Student Journal in Comparative Literature (Spring 2006)

Courses Taught:

English 102: English Composition II
English 200: Speech
English 201: World Literature I
French 222: French Conversation